MARINE CONSULTANTS

bMC is on the lookout for talent!

Interesting picture. Is this you? Of course it's not, but it could be!

In support of our continued global growth and the expansion of our salvage and wreck removal consultancy services, brand MARINE CONSULTANTS are keen to hear from candidates for potential positions based in our London & Hamburg Offices. Our favourite people are energetic, self-motivated team players with an open-minded approach. We are a young and flexible company with a global client base and area of operations. We are a multi-disciplined consultancy working with the Marine Insurance Industry to identify solutions to their often complex projects. If this sounds interesting and you have previous commercial seagoing experience, naval architecture or engineering qualification or have practical experience of salvage & wreck removal, then get in touch. Fluent English and a high written standard is a must, further languages are a plus. You can expect frequent foreign travel and work in challenging operating environments, often at short notice. When working from the office, communications with our clients including face-to-face appointments will be just a part of the daily activity.

If you think that this sounds like you then get in touch. Send an email including your CV to;
